

Abstract

A personalized prescription drug compliance kit is provided that allows the practice of dispensing samples of prescription drugs with personalized information relating to the prescribing doctor and his relevant contact information, as well as patient specific information, such as emergency information, drug dosage and interactions, and the like. The specific personalized information is provided for on a portable pillbox that may be carried at all times by the patient. Packaged samples of the drug to be prescribed are affixed to an informational backing card, along with the personalized information printed on a portable pillbox for convenient customization and distribution at a prescribing doctor's office.